

Do I need to give my permission to echo?

Yes. You will only be able to join the echo service once you have given your consent to be registered and for your care information to be shared. If you lose the ability to make your own choices about information sharing, a doctor or nurse will make a decision in your best interest, in consultation with your family/carers.

What information will be held about me?

The recording and sharing of your information is crucial to ensuring your decisions and wishes are respected by different staff and organisations. If you give your consent then echo will keep an electronic record of your wishes and preferences for your future care, agreed care plans and information for professionals (for example, contact details for your main carer or medication issues). In addition, we may also ask for your permission to access your electronic GP records so that more detailed information is available to us if you call for advice.

What is echo?

echo is available to people who have an advanced terminal diagnosis or are approaching and entering the end phase of their life. We are also here to support your family, friends and carers.

We know that it is likely that you will be supported by a number of services and health care professionals. Contacting the right person can sometimes be complicated and time-consuming, especially if you are unsure who is the right person to help you.

We also know that health care services are not always good at sharing information about your care preferences with each other, this can sometimes mean that health care professionals may not know how and where you want to be cared for.

echo is a telephone service where you can access support and advice 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Our aim is to improve your care by acting as a single point of contact for you, so that if your needs or situation changes you only have to call one number.

We will also record your views and wishes within a confidential electronic personalised care plan. This plan will be shared only with doctors, nurses, social care providers, ambulance services, out-of-hours GP services and other professionals involved in your care to help them understand the choices you have made.

How do I contact echo?

Call 01903 254 789 (Option 3)
24 hours a day, any day of the year

How will echo help me?

The echo team will be able to give you some advice and support over the telephone. If they are not able to advise you themselves, they will consult with other specialist nurses and doctors to help you. echo nurses will also be able to ask other services to respond to your care needs or will advise and direct you or your relative or carer to other services that can help you.

When can I use echo?

You, or your relative or carer, can contact echo 24 hours a day, every day of the year, if you need advice or support:

- If your condition or needs change and you/your relative or carer are not sure what to do
- If you need advice about accessing equipment or practical care support
- If you need to know how to access bereavement support

echo is available for health care professionals if they need additional advice, guidance and information about your care.

How will echo effect my relationship with other services?

echo will not replace your relationship with your GP, community nurse, hospice, palliative care service, hospital or any other health care professional. Instead it will work alongside those services to improve communication and make it easier for you to access the right care.
